

AMSTERDAM INTERNATIONAL WATER WEEK (AIWW) WAS HELD IN AMSTERDAM, NETHERLANDS

On 31st October 2017, Amsterdam International Water Week (AIWW) was held in Amsterdam, Netherlands. Representative of Hanoi University of Natural Resources and Environment (HUNRE), Assoc.Prof.Dr.Pharm Quy Nhan and lecturers from Water Resources Faculty were invited to participate in this workshop.

In the framework of the workshop “Living labs-a gateway to water management innovations”, Assoc. Prof.Dr. Pham Quy Nhan shared experiences in using Community Science in water resource management in the Red River Delta.

The discussion of delegates in the workshop

Presented at the workshop, Assoc.Prof.Dr.Pharm Quy Nhan highlighted the significance of the community in monitoring, investigating and supporting information in Water Resource Management. Moreover, for the highest result, Assoc.Prof.Dr.Pharm Quy Nhan also analyzed and offered scientific solutions in the process of applying community to study. Also in this workshop, Assoc.Prof.Dr. Pham Quy Nhan answered interview of the media asked about the issues that he will presented at the workshop (for more information please visit: <https://youtu.be/BTVJA9UeI48>).

Beside the presentation of Assoc.Prof.Dr.Pharm Quy Nhan, there was other contributions from Ms. Anne-Wil Lucas (Startup Delta) on start-up in water resource, Mr. Luca Sittori (Ecoshape) on suspended sediment utilization, Prof. Mr Jonkman (TU Delft) on flood management and Mrs. Hla Oo New (Irrigation and Water Utilization Management Department, Myanmar) on the challenges of water management in Myanmar.

For further information, please visit: <http://www.vpdelta.nl/en/news/living-labs-a-gateway-to-water-management-inaanovations>